Rural India

Born to humble farmers, Santosh Phad, Founder and Managing Trustee, ThinkSharp Foundation, began his literacy journey from a Marathi medium, Zilla Parishad school in Mandwa, in Maharashtra's Beed district. He harboured an undefined childhood passion to do something good for society. Too young to frame his own goals, Santosh followed his parent's dream to educate their children. The family moved from Mandwa to the nearest Taluka schools in Parli, in search of good quality education and, unknowingly, trod a path void of competent educational infrastructure in the rural belts. The impressions gained during his school and engineering college days, and the beginning of his corporate career in Mumbai instilled a strong desire in Santosh to build a world where rural kids gained the same learning opportunities as their urban counterparts across government schools. He has since bridged the learning and digital divide via his indigenous concepts of Study Malls, StudyFin, and the Digi Library app, impacting 9000+ rural children and 250+ schools across Maharashtra's 13 districts, also foraying into Gujarat and Chennai
